

Voice Lessons for Adults

Christine Alfano, soprano

Intensive technical work for those looking to transform their voices

The Alfano Voice Studio offers private voice lessons to adults of all ages and experience levels. Current adult members of the studio can be seen performing in church and symphony choirs, community and professional theatre productions, gigging in town and touring throughout the USA, singing in operas, and showcasing their talents at local open mic and karaoke nights. Still others choose to take lessons just for their private enjoyment, finding a great deal of gratification in reaching their personal vocal milestones. Many wish to integrate a voice lesson into their weekly routine as part of their "me time," while others may be looking to take lessons for specific audition and/or competition prep.

Adult larynxes are fully developed and thus are able to be taught the whole gamut of advanced technical concepts. I specialize in this kind of intensive voice work, and find that my adult students thrive under the detailed corrections that I am able to provide. The lessons are structured according to the needs and goals of the individual student, which we discover during their initial voice consultation. During an average weekly lesson, we spend the first half of the lesson refining technique through carefully planned vocalizes, and the second half applying the technique to repertoire.
